“Like other books in the “Reference Shelf” set, this book, which is tied to the annual high school debate topic, brings together print and internet articles (30 in this case). Under the broad topic of the title, there are 5 sections: 1) The State of American Education, 2) Reform 2017, 3) In the Classroom—Skills, Knowledge, Climate, 4) Equity and the Achievement Gap, and 5) Education Technology. Interestingly, the preface points out the dangers and the threats to improved public education caused by the current political climate in the United States. As with other volumes in this series, the pieces selected offer a wide range of viewpoints: an article from The National Review argues that only Secretary of Education Betsy DeVos can save American schools, while another presents teachers’ fears of her approach to education. Other items discuss vocational education, funding of public education, and all levels of school from kindergarten to college. Although brief, the book offers a diverse range of texts.

Institutions of all kinds should find this volume of use to their readers. Although fairly expensive for a paperback of its length, school, public and academic libraries should investigate it.”
